

Route planner for Les Deux Platanes, Le Breuil aux Gittons, 36700 Clion sur Indre – both routes will take circa 6 – 7 hrs depending upon speed and number of stops.

From Calais (from Boulogne you can join the motorway at either J29 or J28)

Take the A16 South to Junction 23 Abbeville (cost approx 7 euros), then join the A28 south to Rouen (free).

On the map ignore numbers 1,2,3 and 6 – I printed this to show the route through Rouen!

Follow signs for Le Mans and A13 making sure as you cross the river Seine you are in the right hand (inside) lane as the turn off is straight after the bridge and is a very tight turn. The dual carriageway will bring you to the famous 'cow island' (a roundabout with cow sculptures on) and then on towards the A13 at Junction 22.

You then have a choice: Motorway (A) or non-motorway (B).

Route A

Take the right hand lane towards Le Havre. Stay on the A13 until just after the services when you will join the A28 again – signposted Bordeaux.

At Le Mans take the A11 direction Paris but after 9 kilometers you take the A28 again towards Tours.

The section from Rouen to Tours will cost approx 26 euros

At the end of the A28 you join the A10 which will bring you through Tours.

Take Junction 24 signposted Loches (90 cents)

After the peage turn left at the roundabout and follow signs for Loches.

You will eventually join the D943. After Loches, follow Chatillon sur Indre/ Chateauroux still on the D943 which will bring you eventually to the turnoff for Le Breuil.

Just through Chatillon sur Indre watch for a small sign in blue for Maison Carreau. The next turn right is for Le Breuil. Stay on the village road until you come to the gite.

Route B

Take the left hand lane towards Paris and join the A13 to Junction 19 for Evreux then join the A154 which becomes the N154. At Nonancourt join the N12 to Dreux. Follow signs for Chartres (N154 again). From Chartres follow signs for Chateaudun (N10) then Blois (D924).

Again, the map is just for guidance.

From there follow Chateauroux (may also say Orleans). This will bring you around Blois North East of the city on a dual carriageway. The D956 will bring you to Contres, and at the traffic lights in the town take the right hand fork to St Aignan (D675) (not the left hand fork which is to Chateauroux). You should start to see signs for Chatillon sur Indre.

At the traffic lights in Chatillon, turn left towards Bouzançais and Chateauroux. Just after leaving Chatillon, watch for the small blue Maisn Carreau sign and take the next right for Le Breuil aux Gittons. Stay on the village road until you come to Les Deux Platanes (no 20).

Both A and B will take the same amount of time – approx 7 hours, although B is 50K shorter.
